On Friday, May 28, at 10:00AM, 317 Elm Street, the Ironbound Health Project will hold a Press Conference where public officials and community leaders will voice their continued opposition to At-Sea Incineration Corp.'s plans to build a large toxic waste storage and processing facility at Port Newark. In the past, At-Sea's proposal has been opposed by such groups as the New Jersey Medical Society, the Hudson Regional Health Commission, the City Council of Jersey City, the Hillside Board of Health, some Essex County officials and local community leaders.

In addition, answers from all candidates for public office in the upcoming Newark and Essex County elections, in response to a written request for their position on At-Sea's proposal, will be announced.

At-Sea Incineration has recently intensified their efforts to gain approval for their proposed facility. They have announced the opening of an office at Port Newark, scheduled for June 1. They have submitted their plans to the State Department of Environmental Protection, who has already begun the formal review process on their application.

According to Vic De Luca, Administrative Coordinator of the Ironbound Community Corporation, "The problem of disposal of toxic wastes demands a solution. Instead we are offered another experimental proposal that
